Together with all those everywhere who

1 Corinthians 1:2

No Other Gods Before Me

By Eric Spangler, Asia

Some time ago, Virginia and I were with one of our dynamic leaders in a key ministry center in South India. We had gathered for the 19th anniversary of this Free Methodist church. It was a wonderful celebration, and the church service was three hours long (not because of the guest preacher!)

One of the highlights of that visit was meeting Somaya, a young woman we had heard about but never met personally. My Indian pastor friend told her that we knew her story and that others had been encouraged by her testimony of fully committed faith. She smiled and said how happy she was to know her faith story was now inspiring others.

Somaya's husband came to know Jesus before she did. As a Hindu, she did not like her husband's faith. She turned up the music when he was reading his Bible. She asked why he was following a western god. He worshipped Jesus in one room while Somaya worshipped a Hindu idol in the other room.

Then one day when he was away, Somaya found her husband's Bible lying on the table. She opened it and read the first verse she saw: "I am the Lord your God. You shall have no other gods before me," Exodus 20:3.

The living Word of God had spoken. Somaya was wonderfully saved and baptized after a period of instruction. She then received her own Bible. Now she smiles for Jesus and turns the praise music up!
